

Isaac Watts, 1707
(Hymn 86, Book 2)

86. 86. (C. M.)

Tunbridge

Transcribed from The Bridgewater Collection, 1810.

D minor

Jacob Kimball, 1793
Arranged by Bartholomew Brown, 1810

Tr. 5 10 15
1. Our sins, a - las, how strong they be! And like a vio - lent sea, They break our du - ty, Lord, to thee, And hur - ry us a - way.

C.
2. There, to ful - fill his sweet com - mands, Our spee - dy feet shall move No sin shall clog our wing - ed zeal, Or cool our bur - ning love.

T. 8
3. For ev - er his dear sa - cred name Shall dwell up - on our tongue, And Je - sus and sal - va - tion be The close of eve - ry song.

B.

Tr. 20 25 30
1. The waves of trouble, how they rise! How loud the tempests roar! But death shall land our wea - ry souls Safe on the heav'nly shore.

C.
2. There shall we sit, and sing, and tell The wonders of his grace, Till heav'n - ly raptures fire our hearts, And smile in eve - ry face.

T. 8
3. A thousand years may roll around, Our song shall still go on; To bless the Fa - ther, and the Son, And Spi - rit, three in one.

B.

Arranged by Bartholomew Brown, 1810. Top staff and middle staff exchanged; Counter part written.

Words by Isaac Watts (Hymn 86, Book 2), except econd half of stanza 3, from The Hesperian Harp.

Brown's arrangement appears in William Hauser's The Hesperian Harp, 1848, with all grace notes and accidentals removed.