Editorial

Sebastiano Cherici (1647-1704) was maestro di cappella of the cathedral of Ferrara. After a short spell in Dresden, he took the same position in Pistola. In 1686 he published his Opera terza, Compieta concertata, e breve à 3 e 4 voci, con violini, e ripieni à bene placito. This opus comprises the main parts of the Roman version of the Compline, the last liturgical prayer of the day. The normal practice is to sing three psalms; the selection for the ordinary Sunday is provided here. In contrast to the Vesper, the Compline has only a single antiphons with the psalms. The remaining parts are fixed prayers of the Compline.

The part books for each voice are twofold, named ‘concertans’ and ‘ripieni’, respectively. The ripieni appears in parts 1, 2, 4, 7 and 8, and are always a duplication of the concertans in the tutti sections; these have been omitted in the present edition; instead, solo and tutti are indicated. In addition to the two violins there is a part for a bass instrument ‘fagotto / violone’. The violone is not a 16’ instrument, but an 8’, such as a cello or viola da gamba. The ‘organo’ part is the basso continuo, which may be doubled by a suitable (8’) instrument.

The bass figuration is original. Accidentals are not consistently indicated in the original but do not pose ambiguities. The text spelling and punctuation has been modernised to that in the Liber Usualis (Descée & Socii, 1962).
