In their settings of the Compline responds In manus tuas and In pace, Tudor composers traditionally provided polyphony for those parts of the chant sung by the soloist. The manuscripts' heading for the present piece, In manus Corus, reflects the fact that Sheppard, unusually, has set the section of the chant sung by the chorus.

Sheppard's piece occurs only in this set of four partbooks, where it is the first of four apparently three-part compositions. It is probable that these are all four-part compositions from which a voice has been lost. The second piece in this group, William Mundy's Exsurge Christe, is known to be a four-part piece from a concordance in The Mulliner Book* and it may well be that a gathering of paper containing these four compositions has been lost from MS 17802 (cf. David Mateer's analysis of the structure of the partbooks in Research Chronicle 26 (Royal Musical Association, 1993).

The underlay of the Baritone in bars 8-12 has been altered editorially to a more likely reading. The original reads: 9 -mendo below FA, 10 spi- below last G, 11 -ri- below F, 12 -tum me- below GE.

* This concordance was first mentioned by Frank Llewellyn Harrison: see Gerald Abraham (ed.), The New Oxford History of Music IV: The Age of Humanism 1540-1630 (Oxford, 1968), p.478, footnote 3.
